THIEVES MAKE ANOTHER RAID

Break Into Shop of Chadwick and Trefethen

Clean Up All Revolvers And Several Shot Guns

Once more the shop of Chadwick and Trefethen on Bow street is entered by burglars who made good in their work. The break was made on the Linden street side of the building on Saturday night or early Sunday morning. The thieves pried open an outside shutter which was fastened by a lock on the inside and then forced open the window with a jimmy. It is evident they wanted firearms only as they took every revolver in the place and a half dozen shot guns. Several rifles in the case were not disturbed. In gaining entrance they were obliged to remove a heavy wire screen and climbed over a bench to reach the articles. The break was discovered about 8 o'clock Sunday morning by a workman at the Woods garage who was passing down the street and saw the shutters swinging. He made an examination and was satisfied the place had been entered. He then reported it to the police who are at work on the case.

Hardly a year passes that this shop does not have a visit from burglars and the proprietors have met with no small loss in firearms and other articles.

The Free Hoosier Kitchen Cabinet was given away Saturday, Nov. 18th, to Mrs. W. E. Trent, 161 Cate Street.

HAD GOOD LUCK

Local Gunners Return Well Laden With Game

Local hunters returned on Saturday and Sunday bringing good evidence of their prowess and on Monday slain deer were displayed in many places about the city.

A party consisting of James Harvey of Boyd road, Dr. W. D. Ingles, James Scott and Frank and Joseph Harvey, returned Sunday evening from a two weeks' stay at West Ossipee. They brought home three deer, thirty-two rabbits and two dozen partridges. They report excellent luck on their first part of their trip, but eighteen loches of snow later interfered with their sport.

Ralph Spinnery, and John Stone of the Naval band returned on Saturday from Pittsburg, this state, each bringing a fine deer. The one shot by Mr. Spinnery is displayed in front of Benfield's market.

Hiram D. Merrifield, Edward Sterling and Byron Jones returned on Saturday from Livermore, N. H. The former brought home a good sized buck, but his two companions were not so fortunate.

Dr. S. F. A. Pickering returned on Saturday evening from Moxie lake, Me., where he went with a party of Salem friends. The genial doctor brought home a good sized buck and a doe.

This Monday morning four good sized deer were at the depot consigned to George F. Probie and G. P. Chadwick at York Harbor and two more for H. G. Ellis at York Beach. These were killed at Masardis, Me.

CHARITY ENRICHED BY GENEROUS GIFT

Miss Susan J. Wentworth Gives Wentworth Mansion for Home for Chronic Invalids.

The Mark H. Wentworth Home for Chronic Invalids, has been added to the charitable institutions of this city, and it promises to fill a long felt want, where real charity is needed the most. The new institution is made possible through the generosity of Miss Susan J. Wentworth of Pleasant street.

Miss Wentworth, who has long been prominent in all of the charitable affairs of this city, has given the historical old Wentworth mansion on the corner of Pleasant and Wentworth streets, for this purpose and further more has endowed it with $1,000 for the first five years which ensures it a good start. The old mansion, one of the most stately old buildings of this city, has for some weeks been in the hands of the carpenters and plumbers, and it has been entirely renovated and modernized, with the addition of three bath rooms, etc. The house has been furnished, the fine old furnishings having been replaced, and the historic features of the house in every way preserved. The rooms are all large and airy and the entire house is admirably fitted for such a hospital or home.

There is a fine old garden extending from the house to the shores of the South Pond, and the view from the rear of the house is beautiful.

Miss Wentworth has long known the need of such a home here and as soon as it was possible provided it in a most substantial manner. The institution is given in the name of her father, whose name it bears and it will serve to long cherish the name of its donor and her father.

It is expected that the home will be opened by the first of the year. Miss Wentworth provided for the incorporation of the home and a meeting for that purpose was held on Saturday afternoon, and the names of the incorporators were given out. They are Miss Susan J. Wentworth, Charles E. Wentworth, Esq., Mrs. James R. May, Dr. John J. Berry, Mr. Harry E. Boynton and Judge Thomas H. Simes. They have organized with Mr. Wentworth, president, and Judge Simes, clerk, and the list of directors, who are the other incorporators will be added to in time.

The following self explanatory notice has been issued:

At a meeting of the incorporators of The Mark H. Wentworth Home for Chronic Invalids held November 18th, 1911, at the mansion of the late Hon. Ebenezer Wentworth on Pleasant street, the organization, of the corporation was effected.

The corporation is formed for the purpose of establishing and maintaining a home for the care of persons afflicted with chronic diseases, who on that account are ineligible to admission to a regular hospital.

The mansion and grounds are the gift of Miss Susan J. Wentworth, who in addition to this gift has pledged the annual sum of one thousand dollars for five years towards the support of the home. The house is ready for occupancy and the trustees expect to open the home on or about January 1, 1912.

The following are the incorporators: Miss Susan J. Wentworth, Charles E. Wentworth, Esq., Mrs. James R. May, Dr. John J. Berry, Mr. Harry E. Boynton and Mr. Thomas H. Simes.

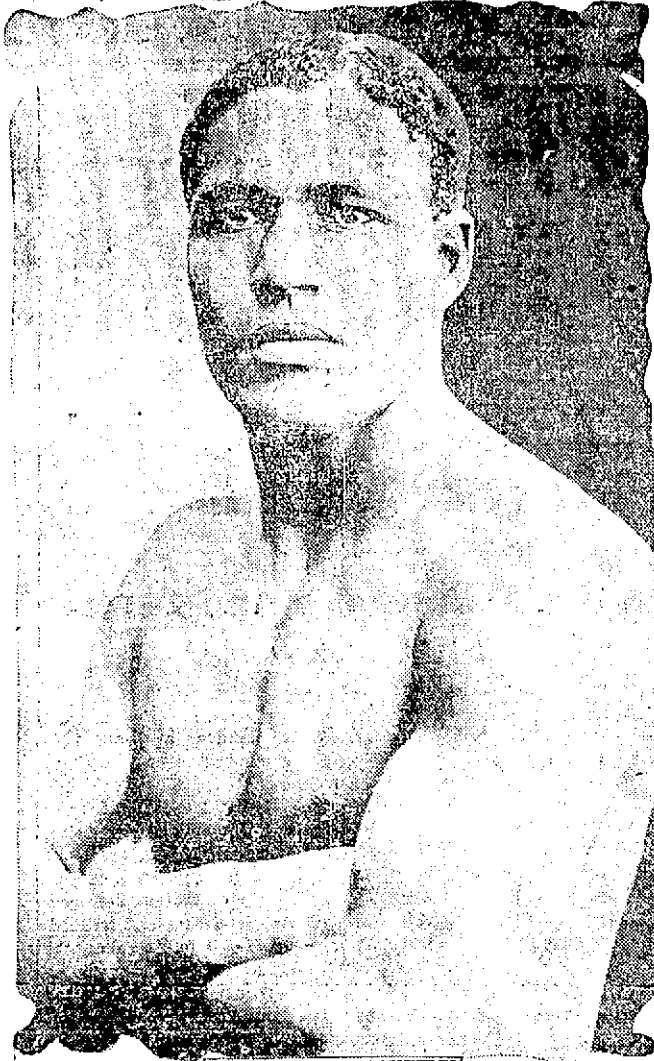

Charles E. Wentworth, Esq., was elected president, and the incorporators formed the present board of trustees, the number of which will be increased at a later meeting.

The meeting adjourned to the call of the president, when additional members will be elected to the corporation.

This announcement is made by direction of the trustees that the public may be fully informed regarding the work undertaken.

Charles E. Wentworth, President
Thomas H. Simes, Clerk.

A FREAKY ENGINE

Locomotive at Lowell, Mass., Goes on Rampage

Lowell, Mass., Nov. 19.—Through a range freak, which railroad mechanics have not been able to explain, Boston and Maine engine No. 1339, sent on a rampage today, wandered out of the roundhouse, threw another locomotive from the track and then, changing its mind backed into the roundhouse and right through the brick wall, ending up on its back a Hale's creek.

Engine 1339 came in from its usual daily run late yesterday, and was asked into its stall and after being leaned up and its fire banked for the night was left alone. No one, so far as the railroad authorities have been able to learn, went near the Mogul from that moment until a daring engineer climbed over the engine and it lay on its back in the brook it shut off the steam.

Only a few men were around the roundhouse on Howard street, when the iron monster with a sudden rebound and explosion of steam, started from its stall. Passing through the door the engine started for the main track, but a heavy freight locomotive blocked its path. With one stroke 1339 tossed its fellow from the path, hesitated, snorted a few times and then started back as suddenly as it came. The watching railroad men expected to see the monster stop in its stall and then wake up but it didn't. Instead its crashed, tender first, through the double brick wall in the rear. The tender dropped off about twelve feet into the brook, followed by the locomotive itself, which landed on top.

Railroad men who investigated declare the throttle was set at the neutral point, which would mean that the engine should stand still. The only explanation which they have to offer is that the engine "went crazy." Superstitious railroad men say the number of the engine was at fault. No 1339 comprises a "13," and a multiple of 13—"39."

Gold Dust Brightens the Home

Nothing is so attractive as a cleanly home; nothing contributes so much to cleanliness as Gold Dust. No matter what it touches—china, pots and pans, floors, woodwork, clothes, etc.—it cleans thoroughly, leaves everything spotlessly clean, bright and attractive.

Don't use up all your time and strength trying to keep things clean; use Gold Dust everywhere you can—in all your household cleaning—and let it do the work. It works so quickly and thoroughly that really it makes cleaning a pleasure instead of a task. It makes home "sweet" home.

COINS AND CILLS FLEW

J. Pierpont Morgan Takes a Fall in Church

New York, Nov. 19.—J. Pierpont Morgan tripped in church today and falling to the floor spilled a collection plate piled high with money. The banker was uninjured.

Mr. Morgan, who is senior warden of St. George's Protestant Episcopal church, was about to pass the plate to Bishop Greer for the offertory benediction when he stubbed his toe in a misplaced new cushion that lay on the floor just behind the chancel rail and fell on his hands and knees. Silver coins, bills and envelopes containing checks, which Mr. Morgan had collected from the congregation, were scattered over a wide area and the silver plate, which he juggled with desperately for a moment went rolling away.

R. Fulton Cutting, the junior warden, former Mayor Seth Low, a vestry man, and several clergymen were quickly at Mr. Morgan's side, and the banker was soon on his feet again unhurt, he said, and apparently not at all perturbed—in fact quite the blindest man at the chancel.

The incident, witnessed by thousands in the crowded edifice, occurred in an interval of the special service commemorative of the 100th anniversary of the foundation of St. George's parish.

Mr. Morgan probably was the victim of his own gallantry, for the cushions, a dozen or more, were placed on the chancel steps to permit men, women, who had been standing in the back of the church to sit down. It was Mr. Morgan's suggestion that some of the pews, including his own, be drawn out for cushions, and while the wardens and vestrymen were taking up the collection those seated on the chancel steps stood up and in some instances the cushions were thrown back of the steps. One cushion, however, remained and it was this three-inch obstruction which Mr. Morgan's foot encountered.

LONG JOURNEY IN POWER BOAT

tends to Use Panama Canal as Far as It Is Built

Providence, Nov. 19.—In his 20th year over boat George Washington, Harry Richie of Fall River, Mass. sailed his evening from Field's Point on an upper Providence River for a trip of about 6700 miles to San Francisco.

He will make the hazardous journey done by water, while his pretty sister usie follows along overland to the various points the youthful mariner will touch at between here and the Panama Canal.

After crossing the isthmus, Richie will cruise up the Pacific slope to the olden Gate and Miss Susie will skip long the seaport points to keep track of her brother and his small ship. She will act as his special coast guard and on the way incidentally sell photographs of the George Washington, on her commander and herself. A expected that the income from this all place gasoline enough on the ritt to keep her plugging away at five miles an hour until the end of her long voyage is reached.

Richie's dory will have a piece of both hung on to her for a sail before he passes in by Hell Gate for a New York visit Wednesday. In a Connecticut shipyard a stiff, short mast is to be shipped and when there is wind he "kicker" will be shut off and fuel economized.

The George Washington is much more diminutive than the Sea Bird which three Providence yachtsmen sailed from here to Gibraltar last summer. She measures a short 16 feet on the keel and has but 1.2 net draft. The water line is 18 feet 4 inches, and her beam is a trifle under seven feet. She is classed as 29 footer, but mosquito fleet yachtsmen declare she is from 21 to 22 over it.

CUTTING DOWN THE TONNAGE

At the advance of cold weather the Boston and Maine railroad have ordered a reduction in tonnage of freights between Boston and Portland. Through trains it is said will haul 45 loaded cars and 20 cars will make up a local freight. It is reported that when the terminal division are prepared to handle more freight at these points that the largest and most powerful engines will be added to the freight service and will be able to drag sixty cars over the line.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1911.

The turkey does not stop to wonder why he is being fed with such a lavish hand just now. He will know between now and Thanksgiving.

It seems strange after all the those people who knew nothing of the symptoms of many diseases, seem to remain in about as good health as the germ cranks, who even wipe of a door knob, before they put their hand on it.

Testimony was recently introduced in a criminal trial, by a professor, to show the mental incompetency of the defendant. It was shown that at the age of twenty he failed in spelling, grammar and the Bible, and in singing he was marked poor. Happily for great numbers of persons such a showing would not class them as feeble-minded and might not disqualify them for matriculation at an institution of the higher learning.

Many Nova Scotia may profess a sense of injury at being designated as "Blue-noses," but that nickname is likely to become generally accepted. Like Yankee by New Englanders as a worthy distinction is indicated by adoption by the federated apple-growers as a brand. Every barrel handled under the successful cooperative system recently established in the Province bears, with the individual producer's name, the familiar appellation. A brand of Nova Scotia potatoes has long been known as "Blue-noses."

New Hampshire's first "ad day" comes three days before Thanksgiving for this reason the turkey will probably taste either better or worse, the contingency depending upon the success or failure of the movement to begin the state—Bridford Journal.

Three days of grace are usually ample time for the average New Hampshire person to rejoice or forget a disappointment, so don't worry but, our advice will be eaten with the usual relish.

AMONG OUR EXCHANGES

Taft or Roosevelt

Theodore Roosevelt's campaign against William H. Taft is without parallel in American politics.

Jefferson named Madison for President and Jackson named Van Buren as absolutely as Roosevelt named Taft, but both Jefferson and Jackson were as loyal to their successors as Roosevelt has been to his successor.

Roosevelt's support of Taft ended with the election in 1908. Since Taft was inaugurated Roosevelt has been the inspiration of every movement and every intrigue within the Republican party to prevent Taft's re-nomination. In Theodore Roosevelt the anti-Taft insurgents found their moral leader. In Theodore Roosevelt Wall street now finds its most powerful championship against the administration.

Can he now defeat Taft for re-nomination? It is not impossible; it is not improbable. Thus far he has played the game with considerable skill, while Taft by his innumerable blunders has made himself an easy victim of Roosevelt's superior political talents.

The opinion is widespread among Republican politicians that Taft, if re-nominated, is doomed to defeat. Many of the western states will send anti-Taft delegations to the Republican National Convention. Some of these delegates will be instructed for La Follette; others will be unpledged. The Southern mercenaries are usually controlled by the administration, but they would not hesitate to desert Taft for Roosevelt if they thought Roosevelt had a better chance of election. They are always for the candidate that can keep them in office. If New York can be swung for Roosevelt the convention will be stampeded. Taft would call of nomination and Roosevelt would be the logical choice.

The issue reduces itself to a question of whether Roosevelt can get the New York delegation. This in turn hinges largely upon the attitude of Big Business, which is in sympathetic relationship with the Republican State machine. Roosevelt is ready to play Wall street's game, but is Wall street ready to play Roosevelt's game? He has made the most audacious bid for Wall street's support that any candidate for president ever made, but is Wall street

ALL DRUGGISTS

FIFTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Gleanings From Files of Portsmouth Chronicle

The Fall term of the Eliot Academy and Normal School was closed last week by an examination highly satisfactory to the trustees of the institution and others who were present.

Tomorrow, Thursday, having been appointed by Gov. Washburn as Thanksgiving in the neighboring state of Maine, all work, we understand, will be suspended on the Portsmouth Navy Yard during that day. This arrangement will be gratifying to many of the workmen employed there who reside in that State.

The machinery of the new steamer Keasarge is nearly all put in, and a trial of it will be made at the Navy Yard on Saturday next.

Preparations for the winter have commenced at the Navy Yard, in the way of clearing up, housing timber, etc. A large number of carpenters are soon to be discharged, and there will probably be but one vessel built this winter, the keel of which is already being laid in the ship-house, from which the Ossipee was launched. Upwards of two thousand names are on the payroll of November. We learn that hereafter payments are to be made monthly, in obedience to an order from Washington.

Capt. Andrew A. Harwood, Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance and Hydrography, visited the Portsmouth Navy Yard on Tuesday on his annual tour of inspection, and was received with the customary salute.

Mr. Meinertzh has recently taken quite a large series of views, for the stereoscope, of our principal streets, public buildings, private residences, etc., and has been eminently successful. They are admirably executed and our citizens would only consult their own interests, should they obtain of him pictures of places and scenes endeared to them by long acquaintance and hallowed by many pleasing remembrances, before they make selections from other collections, not better executed, and not more worthy of their attention, however strongly fashion demands that they should purchase "foreign views."

Mr. Nathan Jones has removed his livery stock to his new and elegant stables on Vaughan street. Maj. Goodwin, of the City Hotel, we understand is to conduct a Stone Stable for halting and boarding.

A rare opportunity to purchase an Oyster Saloon, or nice marble tables and other fixtures and furniture, will be found among our auction notices this morning.

The workmen at the Navy Yard will today receive payment for the last half of the month of October.

Miss Swain, the artist, of Newburyport, has taken passage in the steamer of this week for California.

No organization does more effective work in bringing substantial happiness to the downtrodden and oppressed of the under world. But prince and pauper fare well on Thanksgiving day. The charitable disposed and the philanthropic organizations know who the real poor are. They are always with us. But the people who really suffer on these feast days are those who are hanging on to the ragged edges of a disappearing prosperity, the poor but proud. They are doing everything they can to keep out of the pauper class. They haven't reached the point where they are willing to sit down at a big public Thanksgiving dinner and have their rich friends come into the gallery to watch them eat. Nevertheless these people are among us by hundreds. There is no neighborhood without them. They need a life. To extend them a helping hand without ostentation, to offering them a cup of cold water without heralding it about town is real charity. While the prince and the pauper regale themselves, let us seek to help the silent and judiciously do something for the class of unseen, unknown poor.—Malden Evening News.

OLD MIRACLE PLAYS

Performed in Town Squares With the Crudest Kind of Scenery.
From the beginning of the pageant in the old mystery and miracle plays of the twelfth century to the elaborate and highly artistic productions of the twentieth is indeed a far cry. Not only was the work of these early actors far below modern histrionic standards, but the stage setting, although the most complicated effects were attempted, was of the crudest. The mysteries were performed in the town squares on two story scaffolds, Saints and angels, descended from above on very visible ropes. The flood and the Red Sea were represented by a hole dug in the square and filled with water, and so small that a row boat might only with difficulty turn around therein. Here sea voyages were made from Marseilles to Palestine with one shore of the sea. These were the properties. Irrepressible medieval imagination did the rest.
The mystery plays were dramatizations of the Bible performed by the different trade guilds of the town, each guild giving the part of the story established as its own by immemorial custom. The fishwives and prentices from all the country round thronged into York or Chester whenever a pageant was to be given. Royalty frequently graced the performances. From the Four Seas.

BRIDES IN WHITE.

It Was Mary Stuart Who Set the Fashion For That Color.

The majority of brides choose white when selecting their wedding dress because it is the conventional color, and many persons are of the opinion that it always has been favored. As a matter of fact, it is comparatively modern origin, and in most eastern countries pink is the bridal color.

During the middle ages and in the Renaissance period brides wore crimson to the exclusion of all other colors. Most of the Phantaghet and Tudor queens were married in that vivid hue, which is still popular in parts of Brittany, where the bride is usually dressed in crimson brocade.

It was Mary Stuart who first changed the color of the bridal garments. At her marriage with Francis II, of France in 1558, which took place not before the altar, but before the great doors of Notre Dame, she was gown in white brocade, with a train of pale blue Persian velvet six yards in length. This innovation caused a great stir in the fashionable world of that time. It was not, however, until quite the end of the seventeenth century that pure white—the color worn by royal widows—became popular for bridal garments.—London Sketch.

Jefferson and the Patent Office.

The first patron of our patent system was Thomas Jefferson, who during three years gave his personal attention to every application for a patent. He used to call the secretary of war and the attorney general to examine and scrutinize with him, and they did it so thoroughly that in one year—the first—they granted only three patents. The very first patent of all was given to Samuel Hopkins in 1790 for pearl ashes. Mr. Jefferson held that the patent system was not one for creating revenue, but for encouraging a production of that which is to be of benefit to the whole people. In the first twelve years a single clerk in the state department and a few pigeonholes were all that the "business" of the office required. Then a Dr. Thornton took charge of it and deplored himself to it as a hobby.

The Coster Girl's Plumes.

Ostrich plumes are as much of a necessity to the London coster girl as her earnings, as are the pearl buttons to her masculine companion, and the big trimmed hats with their drooping feathers are familiar in all parades of this class. Many of the girls cannot afford to keep their money tied up in useless plumes; and there thrives a brisk industry in the hiring of these feathers. The loan of a single plume for a day costs a quarter, or for a dollar a gorgeous trio may be had for nothing to be returned promptly the next morning. Weather conditions cause the terms to fluctuate somewhat, since a wet or foggy day will take the curl out of the feathers and make recurling necessary, for which "Arlet" has to pay an extra quarter.—London Tit-Bits.

"Stint" and "Stunt."

Stint is a good word as a noun. As a verb it means something not quite so pleasing. Do not confound it with stunt, however. A stunt is something quite useless. It is the horseplay of the mountebank and has nothing in common with highest productive labor. A stint is the warning to the wise that something demands to be accomplished. A good to the inarguable that time is on the wing.—Atlantic.

Gone to Waste.

"I don't like the way they reported my speech," complained the new congressman.

"Why, they sprinkled in plenty of laughter and applause."

"Yes, but how about all those figures?"—Kansas City Journal.

Cruel.

Wife—John, I gave Fido one of those collars I made, and he went and buried it. Hub—I'm not surprised. He probably took it for a bone.—Boston Transcript.

Just What They Wanted.

An investigator given to the collection of curious data has observed that there are at least three different tones emitted by insects—a low one during flight, a higher one when the wings are held in such manner that they do not vibrate and a yet higher tone when the insect is held so that none of its limbs can be moved. This last, it is pointed out, is the "voice proper" of the insect. In some cases it is produced by the stigmata of the thorax.

Thoughtful Painter.

"I see you are paying the hospital expenses of that painter who fell off the roof?"
"Yes. He's too good a man to lose. As he went down he touched up two or three places which would have been very hard to reach."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

DON'T PULL OUT THE GRAY HAIRS

A Simple Remedy Will Bring Back the Natural Color

"Pull out one gray hair and a dozen will take its place" is an old saying, which is, to a great extent, true, if no steps are taken to stop the cause. When gray hairs appear it is a sign that Nature needs assistance. It is Nature's call for help. Gray hair, dull, lifeless hair or hair that is falling out is not necessarily a sign of advancing age, for with perfect heads of hair without a single streak of gray.

When gray hairs come or when the hair seems to be lifeless or dead, some good, reliable hair-restoring treatment should be resorted to at once. Specialists say that one of the best preparations to use is the old-fashioned "sage tea" which our grandparents used. The best preparation of this kind is Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, a preparation of domestic sage and sulphur scientifically compounded with later discovered hair tonics and stimulants, the whole mixture being carefully balanced and tested by experts.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is clean and wholesome and perfectly harmless. It refreshes dry, parched hair, improves dandruff and gradually restores faded or gray hair to its natural color.

Don't delay another minute. Start using Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur at once and see what a difference a few days' treatment will make in your hair.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

A Loved One Gone

In the passing of Mrs. Grace L. Hatch, a noble wife, faithful daughter, a loyal friend is gone. Many hearts are made sad in consequence. Not only in the home circle but through the entire village she will be greatly missed. Mrs. Hatch possessed many beautiful traits of character, quiet and unassuming, yet ever ready to give of her talents and time to every good cause, church, W. C. T. U. (of which she was a worthy member), or to further any effort for charity, having unusual musical gifts she was able to afford much pleasure to others. A beautiful test of her Christian faith was shown when looking in the faces of her loved ones at her bedside she said, "Don't worry. God will take care of me, I am trusting Him." The sympathy of the community goes out to the husband mother and brother in this great loss, for to them she seemed indispensable to their happiness. Many parents will send a tender thought to the little one so bereft of a mother's loving care.

PAPE'S DIAPEPSIN FOR A BAD STOMACH

No Dyspepsia, Gas, Heartburn or Indigestion in Five Minutes

If you had some Diapepsin handy and would take a little now your stomach distress or indigestion would vanish in five minutes and you would feel fine.

This harmless preparation will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, out-of-order stomach before you realize it.

If your meals don't tempt you, or what little you do eat seems to fill you or lay like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion.

Ask your Pharmacist for a 50 cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a little just as soon as you eat. There will be no sour risings, no belching, no undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, Nausea, Debilitating Headaches, Dizziness or Intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides there will be no undigested food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomach because it prevents fermentation and takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach was in there. Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is at any drug store waiting for you.

These large 50 cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin contain more than sufficient to thoroughly cure almost any case of Dyspepsia, Indigestion or any other stomach disturbance.

ALBERT HEFTY FOUND DEAD.

Albert Hefty, a printer employed on the Dover Tribune since it was started about 16 months ago, was found dead of gas asphyxiation Saturday in his room at the residence of John W. Hogan, publisher of the paper, on Ham street, Dover. As Mr. Hefty did not appear as usual Mr. Hogan went upstairs to investigate. Gas was escaping from the room.

The door was forced and Hefty was found dead in bed, the gas escaping from a jet half turned on and a kerosene lamp burning on the stand.

Deputy Medical Referee Dr. G. A. Tolman decided that death resulted accidentally from inhaling illuminating gas. It is thought that he accidentally hit the gascock before retiring.

Mr. Hefty was born in Germany 47 years ago and came to America with his parents when young. He had worked as a printer in the advertising department of the Manchester Union and with the Rumford Publishing Company at Concord many years. He belonged to several German clubs.

He is survived by his mother, aged 85, of Manchester, who visited him last week. The body was sent to Manchester, Saturday evening.

Darina and The Agents

She Makes One Mistake

By MILDRED STEVENS

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Miss Charity Decker tied a knitted "fascinator" over her scanty hair, bundled herself into a long, warm cape and drew on thick woolen mittens.

"Darina," she called shrilly, and when a girl's slender form had appeared in the kitchen doorway she continued: "I'm going now. Hannibal's been waiting for ten minutes, and I expect that old horse's heels are most froze off. I know it's cruelly to ask you to keep 'em standing around in the snow like this, but I had to get ready, and I couldn't find my spectacles, and then I lost my handkerchief, and I found it and lost it, and I haven't found it again yet. Why there it is on the mantelpiece. I was going to say what the weather is going to be tomorrow."

The girl laughed softly as she pushed the older woman gently toward the door. "There, Aunt Charity, if you stop and talk much longer the horse's heels will freeze off, and Hannibal's looking so impatiently at the door, I won't forget to put the head in the oven at 11 o'clock, and I'll water the plants and put Toby in the washbasin before I go over to Cousin Sarah's to sleep. And I'll expect you home on the 7 o'clock train tomorrow afternoon without fail—there!"

Miss Charity was on the porch by this time and waving a mittened hand to Hannibal Jones, the stage driver. "I'll be there in a jiffy, Hannibal. I've got to say something more to Darina."

Darina laughed merrily as she waved a farewell to Miss Charity's gesticulating mittens, and she went back into the house and closed and locked the door. Miss Charity's departure for Greenville, the next village, was an event that had been talked about for a fortnight, ever since her brother's wife had invited her over to the Baptist donation party and to spend one night. She had left a dozen different commands for her granddaughters to carry out, and the last and the greatest of these was the one concerning agents of any description.

Charity Decker detested agents. She was scarcely polite when members of that honorable calling knocked insistently at her kitchen door. Her strict orders for the reception of any that might call during her absence had been thoroughly drilled into Darina's understanding and out of the tenderness of her heart the girl hoped that the agents would stay away.

"They are not so plentiful in snowy weather," thought Darina as she noted some ginger cookies. "I hope none of them will call, but somehow it does seem as if Little River harbored more canvassers, and—there is one now!"

She popped a pan of cookies in the oven and pushed back her fair hair with a floury hand, leaving a dab of white on the rose of her cheek. She opened the door to find a Syrian rug dealer squatted on the doorstep. Miss Charity's admonitions still rang in her ears.

"No—no!" said Darina emphatically in response to his appealing gestures as he displayed his wares. She closed the door and watched him shamble down the path. Her heart leaped with fright as she saw him pause at the gate and make some sort of mark on the white post with a bit of red chalk. Then, with a sidelong look over his shoulder at the house, he went on his way.

"How dreadful!" thought Darina as she returned to her baking. "Perhaps he has marked the house so he can return tonight and rob us—or perhaps murder!"

There was another knock at the door, and Darina took her cookies out of the oven, before she tiptoed over to the entrance and peered through the crack in the door curtain. A man with a long hooded patent mop impatiently waited on the doorstep.

Darina opened the door.

"Good morning," said the agent courteously. "Are you the lady of the house?"

"Yes," said Darina. "But I do not wish to buy anything today. We have a mop we bought from you last year."

"Very good, ma'am; you cannot need another one now, and you will never unless yours is stolen, for, as I told you last year, when I sold it to you, our mop is practically indestructible. Now, let me show you the best clothes-brush you ever saw—there, ma'am—look at that!"

When Darina had finally added a firmly "no" to his importuning, he gathered up his wares, disposed them about his person and with a bob of his head was gone.

"I hope he doesn't mark the house," murmured Darina as she watched his hurried departure. But the brush man seemed glad to get away from such an unpromising vicinity and pushed to the left neither to the right nor left as he hastened down the road. Presently Darina saw him open Cousin Sarah's green gate and enter the yard.

She went back to her cookies, and an hour passed rapidly. Just as she had placed the last painful of crisp dainties on the table another knock came—loud and imperative.

"This time the agent was a young man, tall and good looking, dressed to the ears in a thick warm overcoat, with a fur cap that rested on his dark head was whipped off as Darina opened the door. He did not carry a bag under his arm, but Darina did not doubt that somewhere concealed about his person was a capacious pocket that would hold innumerable samples of something valuable—probably subscription books.

"Good morning," he said pleasantly and in a very businesslike manner. "Is Miss Charity Decker at home?"

"No," she said coldly.

"Ah," he said in a disappointed tone. Then, without losing his coat, he thrust a gloved hand into an inner pocket. "I wonder if you," he was beginning when Darina interrupted him coolly.

"We don't wish to buy a dictionary, thank you."

His hand dropped to his side, and he flushed redly. "I beg your pardon?"

he was beginning when Darina's voice, a little sharper this time, brought fire to his brown eyes.

"Or a history of the world or reminiscences of anybody," said Darina heartlessly.

"I'm not canvassing for books," he said grimly.

"Nor a patent mousetrap or a carpet beater or fancy note paper," continued Darina recklessly. "We've got a fulling sewing table that turns into a chair."

"Do I look as if I had a folding sewing table concealed about me?" he demanded scornfully, yet with a quiver back of the glitter in his eyes.

"We've got a bread mixer and a patent washer and a freezer."

"Pray spare me the inventory of your household goods," he said cuttingly. "I may as well tell you as rapidly as I can that—"

"And we don't want to purchase any fruit trees or shrubs this year," ended Darina breathlessly and rather frightened at her own lack of courtesy.

"All of which is very interesting indeed; but, as a matter of fact, Mr. Joseph Decker of Greenville asked me to stop here for his sister, Miss Charity, and drive her over to his place. There! That's why I'm here!" he ejaculated in a relieved tone.

Darina's fiery little hands flew up to her reddening cheeks. "Oh, I am so sorry! What have I said?" she faltered. "My aunt went to Greenville by train. She left about an hour ago in the station stage."

"Then I may as well drive along," he said, replacing his cap and turning away, his glance lingering in a troubled way on Darina's sweet, youthful face. "You mustn't disturb yourself over that. You see, I was so slow about explaining who I was that I wonder you thought I was a canvasser of some sort. I suppose you're bothered to death with them."

"We are," said Darina fervently, and in a few words she told him of Aunt Charity's last admonition and also of her experience that morning. "I think the brush man scattered my last atom of patience," she explained.

"I don't wonder," he consoled her. "I believe the same fellow called at the parsonage the other day and—"

"The parsonage?" echoed Darina. "Then you must be Mr. Fleck, the new minister at Greenville?"

"I am," he smiled, baring his head again. "I believe there is some sort of donation party going on for me tonight, my sister, who keeps house for me, advised me to keep out of the way. That is how I happened to call for Miss Decker."

"It was very kind of you, indeed, and I am ashamed of the reception I gave you," said Darina. Just as he was passing through the gate to enter the little cutter that awaited him Darina remembered the red mark on the gatepost. Perhaps Mr. Fleck could reassure her as to its meaning. She recollected hearing Miss Charity say that he had been a missionary.

Instantly she was in the gateway explaining her fears. The minister looked at the rude character closely, thought for a moment, and then a smile broke over his face. "I was connected with a mission in Syria for a year, and I learned something of the language. This merely says it is the house of avarice and merchants will do well to pass it by. It is too bad that it is not written in plain English so all your omnivorous agents might be discouraged."

Darina watched him drive away over the sparkling crust of snow, conscious that her heart had thrilled strangely at the clear, compelling glance of his brown eyes. She went back to her laking quite cured of her ill humor and humming softly under her breath.

The next day when Miss Charity returned home and had evolved from her voluminous wrappings into a very small thin old lady she related with much animation the events of the evening before.

"It was the nicest donation party I ever went to, Darina, and I like that young minister. Why, the first thing I got there he singled me out and told me about coming here and asked all sorts of questions about us. It's coming to call, and I say it's very kind and attentive, because Little River is out of his parish. They're going to have a sociable at the church next week, and your Uncle Joe says he wants us both to come over for it. Don't you want to go?" Miss Charity beamed proudly at her pretty niece.

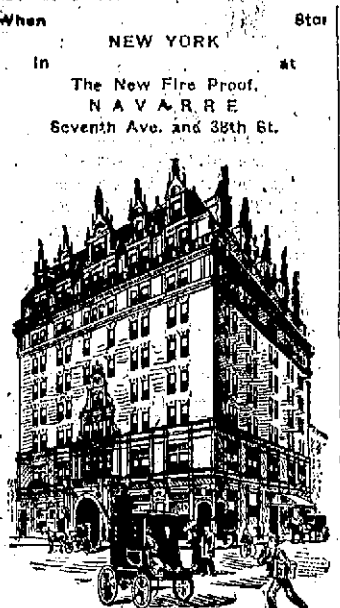

"Yes, indeed," said Darina demurely, with a happy light in her blue eyes.

Miss Charity shot a keen glance at the girl. "Of course, you'll want your new colored cashmere," she said carelessly.

"Of course," agreed Darina, blushing.

It will be owned by the government and will take in practically all the east slope of the Canadian Rockies, extending north and south for 500 miles and will average more than thirty miles in width.

Another historic old landmark has passed. A storm recently felled the tree near Nordermarkt, under which Floris L. count of Holland was peacefully sleeping after the battle of Norderdune in 1661 when he was treacherously murdered by Herman van Kuyk. It is said that Miss Christabel Pankhurst took up the cause of woman suffrage in England because she was not allowed to practice law, although she had passed successfully all the examinations. She has proved so successful as a leader in the suffrage movement that she would no doubt have made an excellent lawyer.

William H. Bright, who has been connected with the government printing office in Washington, introduced the first bill for woman suffrage that was ever introduced in any legislature in this country. He was elected to the legislature when Wyoming was admitted to the Union, and one of his first acts was to introduce the bill. He has been in Washington for the last twenty-three years.

COMMISSIONER ADAMS DEAD

Hon. George H. Adams, formerly Commissioner of New Hampshire, died on Saturday at his home in Plymouth, after a brief illness with heart trouble.

MATTY LONG ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.

In Health and Brooding Over Brother's Death — Well Known Here.

Matthew J. Long, for several years driver for Frank A. Cunningham & Co., of Dover, and well known here, attempted suicide Saturday night at his home on Piggy street, by slashing his throat with a razor.

He was discovered by his wife, who snatched the razor away from him and sent word by a neighbor to the police. To Patrolman Chesley Long he said: "I will finish this job before morning."

City Marshal Adams ordered a guard to be kept over him during the night. Special Policeman Leavitt was assigned to that duty.

"Matty," as Long is familiarly called, has been in ill-health several months and unable to work but little. He has mourned deeply the death of his brother Frank last spring. His mother died only a short time before. He is the last of the family. He has a wife and a young son.

INFECTION BY DISEASE GERMS

A cut, scratch or wound offers a nesting-place for disease germs, and neglect to immediately apply an antiseptic may result seriously. Blood poisoning might follow. The new remedy Cadum is a reliable antiseptic that prevents infection, kills the disease germs, stops the irritation at once, and causes the skin to heal quickly. Cadum should be kept in every home for use in all such emergencies, and for prompt application in skin troubles of adults and infants. Of druggists, 10c. & 25c.

The Merrill lectures, which have been a source of entertainment and instruction for the past three seasons will begin earlier than usual this season, the opening one to be on Dec. 6, when the speaker will be E. Alexander Powell, who will have for his subject, "The Present Situation in Africa."

It is not usually until January that these lectures begin. They are greatly appreciated by the public and are furnished free, the only requisites being an early application for tickets. The improvements at the town hall will come in handy at these, as last year the seating capacity was taxed to an uncomfortable state.

Charles H. In the mean time there have been many who are on the look out and have been expecting him daily. Foster is all the way from Chicago, according to reports and has been on the road since Sept. 1.

TIMELY HINTS FOR FARMERS

Trees on the Farm.

Every dollar invested in plants, trees and flowers adds wealth as well as beauty to the farmstead. Trees increase the value of the farm and make life more enjoyable for those who live in the home.

There is no more genuine pleasure than planting shade, nut and fruit trees except the comfort of having them on the place. As trees grow and spread their branches and the foliage unfolds, develops and falls from year to year the owner of the place feels proud that he has given pride enough to plant trees and aesthetically sentiment enough to appreciate them after they were planted. Trees make the home brighter.

A place without shade and fruit trees is like a desert—exposed to the burning sun of summer and the cutting blasts of winter and without good cheer in the spring.—Farm and Ranch.

Hog Notes.

A loose pig is a sure sign of a poor farmer. Once thoroughly infested the only way to get rid of the vermin is to dip the pig with some good disinfectant.

When a pig trough is constructed upright boards should be inserted occasionally to keep the pigs from crowding and clashing one another from the feed.

The hoofs of old hogs, unless trimmed, will sometimes become so long that the hogs are unable to accommodate and the animal will be able to stand straight on its feet. This is something that always wants to be looked out for.

Rotation For Hay Crops.

Wheat, corn and other crops are no more improved by rotation than hay. The Minnesota experiment station shows that a plot continuously cut for hay the past fifteen years has given an average yield of 1.73 tons per acre, while on a plot under three year rotation of wheat, clover and corn hay has yielded the past ten years an average of 2.3 tons per acre. In a five year rotation of wheat, timothy and clover, pasture, oats and corn the hay has yielded an average of 3.3 tons per acre since 1900. Eight tons of mature per acre were applied once in five years on the five year plot. There is money in nature.

The Best Winter Milkers.

It has been proved that the cow coming fresh in the fall and giving her largest flow of milk through the winter will produce during the year of lactation from one-fourth to one-half more than the cow coming fresh in the spring. To make her do this, however, she must be well fed and sheltered during the winter to maintain a heavy flow till new pasture grass comes in the spring, when she will again increase in flow.

CAUSES OF BAD FLAVORS IN MILK

Improper Feeding and Lack of Cleanliness to Blame.

The abnormal or injurious flavors in milk are of two kinds—first, those due to feed eaten by the cow; second, those due to contamination.

The first kind is scientifically spoken of as feed flavors and is due to the cow eating large quantities of turnips, onions, ensilage, beets, raygrass, etc. This ill flavor is due to volatile oils contained in the strongly flavored feeds. Such flavors leave the animal through the different secretions and excretions of the body.

When feeding is done immediately after milking, these feed flavors largely pass off through other channels or secretions than the milk and are not noticeable. It is also maintained that if some rough forage be fed along with such feeds that produce ill tastes in milk it assists in obviating such flavors.

It is within the power of the dairyman to obviate the second flavor of contamination. This class of ill flavor is largely due to contaminating bacteria. Of these there are many, each giving its peculiar flavor. Another contaminating flavor is due to the absorption of certain strong odors.

The cause of the contamination of milk is largely due to lack of perfect cleanliness with the milking utensils, surroundings, methods of delivery and personal cleanliness.

The udder and adjacent parts should be washed with clean water and wiped dry with a clean, dry towel. The hands and clothing of the milkman should be clean. Bottles, buckets, etc., should be sterilized with live steam and turned upside down so as to prevent the collection of dust, which always contains germs and mold spores. Small top pails should be compulsory by law.—R. P. Kauppi, Colorado.

Arrange For Early Hatching.

Broilers bring good prices early in the spring and for that reason arrangements should be made to hatch early. The early winter layers may hatch the little chicks for spring broilers. But do not overlook the advantages of the incubator.

POLICE COURT.

In police court on Saturday afternoon James Casey, an old timer, was fined $2 and cost for being drunk.

Ethel Anderson and John Lee, both colored, were charged with adultery and were held in $200 for the upper court.

William Towell was given a suspended sentence.

WERE YOU IN THE GAME?

Here is a Chance for Shorlocke and Other Gumshoe Artists

By the reports coming from a well known Congress street business man, there is plenty of overtime work for up-to-date gumshoe men. He may write a book entitled, "Who's Been Here Since I Been Gone." On entering his place of business (up one flight) recently, he was surprised to find his rooms had been converted during the night, into what could be called first class poker joint. The floor was sprinkled with sawdust, burned matches, dice and candles. While chips and cards were very much in evidence in fact the stars had just finished a 24 hour session.

The proprietor never gambles himself but he thinks he could learn fine points of the game if he could only get next to the card artists for whom he is paying rent. He would like to take a look at his tenants.

In the meanwhile a locksmith has had quite a job and some money has been invested for something stronger in barring up his door.
